In general, no nation lives without customs and traditions. However, the degree of adherence to traditions in life can be different. Customs and traditions also play an important role in the life of the Uzbek people and have a specific impact on socio-cultural development.

Firstly, customs and traditions express the spiritual world of man and serve his spiritual purification and elevation. Secondly, customs and traditions enrich the cultural life of the nation. They ensure its progressive development in connection with its past, present and future. Thirdly, customs and traditions are associated with certain costs. It is necessary to take into account the existence of its material and spiritual aspects. The results in socio-cultural life are manifested in the normative relationship between these aspects.

Result: If attention is paid only to the material aspects of customs and traditions, the tendency increases, and the spiritual significance of any tradition decreases. This situation can have a negative aspect to a certain extent. It is natural that this negatively affects not only socio-economic development, but also the spiritual and moral world of people, the universal human and moral foundations of society, customs and traditions should be inextricably linked with social development. The use of external sources helps students not only in language learning, but also in vividly mastering the language through real-life materials and in the future in the process of work.
